

SonambaPro, a New Product for Seniors with Home Health Monitoring, Launches at 2012 International CES Show, January 10-13

With all the well-being and communication functionality of Sonamba

Durham, NC - November 21, 2011 - pomdevices, LLC will unveil SonambaPro, a new Home Health Monitoring product for seniors packed with even more well-being functionality than its predecessor, Sonamba. Families can now receive added insight into their aging loved ones' health through adaptable, lightweight measurement tools such as blood pressure cuffs, weight scales, glucometers and spirometers that record important vitals. Thus, helping to give families and caregivers peace of mind while helping reduce readmittance visits for seniors living independently. And, it's affordable price makes it an easy choice for families with seniors that may need more supervised care. Now, thanks to SonambaPro, families can finally relax, knowing their loved ones are safe.

SonambaPro has all the functionality of Sonamba and more: motion and sound sensors that monitor activity levels in the home, important medication reminders and social communications like texting and digital photo sharing that help families far away stay in touch. Add the recent additions of the new Home Health Monitoring functionality to the long list of already impressive features and SonambaPro is truly an all encompassing technology device that every senior should own.

The 7-inch touchscreen plug-and-play device is easy-to-use and placed in the home, offering seniors flexibility to continue with their daily routines. The device is stationed in an area with the highest levels of movement and learns activity patterns through motion and sound sensors. It then compares the current activity levels with historic levels. Family members are alerted right away if anything appears out of the ordinary via text message or email. The device can even be remotely accessed by visiting MySonamba.com or using the iPhone App, ideal for those families and caregivers on-the-go.

The last product pomdevices, LLC released was named as the 2011 Popular Science "Product of the Future." SonambaPro looks to make an even bigger impact in the lives of seniors and their families with the new Home Health Monitoring functionality.

SonambaPro will be showcased in the TechZone location: Living in the Digital Times TechZone, Digital Health Section, at booth 3330.
